Foreign exchange reserves

715. SHRI K. RAMA MOHANA RAO:
SHRI RAMA MUNI REDDY SIRIGIREDDY:

Will the Minister of FINANCE be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that enormous rise in the foreign exchange reserves is going to create problem in future;

(b) whether it is also a fact that according to the National Commission of Applied Research, with increase in foreign exchange reserves there is every possibility of inflation going up and thereby creating other problems in the country; and

(c) if so, what is Government's reaction thereto?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF FINANCE (SHRI S.S. PALANIMANICKAM): (a) to (c) Foreign exchange reserves are used for reducing volatility and maintaining orderly conditions in the foreign exchange market. The level of reserves to be held by the country depends on various factors. With the changing profile of capital flows, the traditional approach of assessing reserve adequacy in terms of import cover has been broadened to include other parameters, like the size, composition, and risk profiles of various types of capital flows, as well as the likely external shocks to which the economy is vulnerable. In its Quarterly Review of the Economy published in April, 2004, the National Council for Applied Economic Research (NCAER) observed that the RBI has been vigorously conducting open market operations in both foreign and domestic assets for stabilising the exchange rate and maintaining a lower level of inflation. The focus of the monetary policy in recent times has been on moderating the impact of foreign currency inflows. During 2003-04, the RBI moderated the impact of foreign currency inflows amounting to Rs. 124,169 crore through open market sale of Government securities and repo operations under the Liquidity Adjustment Facility.
